YOUR PROFILE

YOUR PATTERN

Not yet full burnout — but trending hard toward it. The signals are showing up consistently: low energy, less patience, a creeping sense that something is off. The good news is that catching it here means prevention is still possible. The window closes if left unaddressed.

Your emotional signature

Functional but quietly depleted. Saying yes more than you mean to. The tiredness that a weekend no longer fixes.

TRIGGER

Saying yes again when you mean no · Accumulating small commitments · Feeling like you are always slightly behind · Chronic mild overwhelm

RESPONSE

Push through and ignore it · Compensate with caffeine or distraction · Brief irritability then back to normal · Quietly withdraw from optional things first

ACTION

Work later to catch up · Scroll to decompress · Cancel low-priority social plans · Tell yourself it will ease up soon

COST

Baseline energy trending lower each week · Sleep quality declining slightly · Patience thinning with people you care about · Small joys becoming harder to access

Your 4-week arc

Week 1 — Acknowledge	Name what is drifting before it becomes a crisis
Week 2 — Protect	Build the habits that stop the drift from deepening
Week 3 — Attune	Learn your personal warning sequence before the next cycle
Week 4 — Sustain	Make prevention automatic — not a recovery project

WHEN YOU SPIRAL

3-step protocol for each acute moment. Use it — do not think about it.

OVERWHELM

Heart racing. Too much at once. Cannot prioritise.

1. Ground your body
   Both feet flat on the floor. Full exhale — longer out than in. Say: I am here, I am safe right now.
2. Name one thing only
   Not the list. One thing. The single most pressing item. Write it. Everything else is later.
3. Two minutes then decide
   Work only on that one thing for two minutes. After two minutes: stop or continue.

SHUTDOWN

Numb, detached, going through the motions.

1. Name it out loud
   Say or write: I am in shutdown. My system is protecting me. It is temporary. I am not broken.
2. One physical action
   Cold water on wrists. Stand and stretch arms wide. Walk to a window. Body re-engages through movement.
3. 5-4-3-2-1 grounding
   5 things you see. 4 you can touch. 3 you hear. 2 you smell. 1 you taste. Returns attention to the present.

ANXIETY SPIKE

Sudden panic. Chest tight. Catastrophic thoughts starting.

1. 4-7-8 breath
   In through nose for 4. Hold for 7. Out through mouth for 8. Three cycles. Activates parasympathetic response.
2. Question the catastrophe
   Ask: is this happening right now, or am I predicting? Anxiety lives in the future. You live here.
3. Reduce the scope
   What is one thing you can do or decide in the next 10 minutes? Do only that.

WEEK 1

ACKNOWLEDGE

Name what is drifting before it becomes a crisis.

DAILY SCHEDULE

TIME	PRACTICE	WHAT TO DO
6:30 AM	4-7-8 breath	3 rounds before picking up your phone. Non-negotiable starting point.
6:34 AM	Energy rating	1-10. Before coffee, before news. Your raw number.
6:36 AM	One word	How do you actually feel right now? Write it. One word only.
12:00 PM	Midday check	Did energy drop? What triggered it? Took 30 seconds to note.
12:03 PM	Boundary notice	Did you agree to something this morning you did not want to? Just note: yes or no.
9:00 PM	Body scan	Head to feet. Jaw, shoulders, stomach. Breathe into each. Release on the exhale.
9:05 PM	Pattern log	What cost energy today? What was the earliest signal? One sentence.
9:07 PM	Tomorrow anchor	Set one intention for tomorrow. Reduce friction. Make showing up easier.

WEEK 1 FOCUS

Name what is drifting before it becomes a crisis. The drift is early. Every 3-second pause between trigger and reaction compounds across 30 days into a fundamentally different trajectory.

TECHNIQUE LIBRARY

HOW THE TOOLS WORK

Six techniques matched to The Early Burnout. Exact steps.

01 — DAILY CHECK-IN

Two minutes each morning. Energy 1-10. One word for how you actually feel. Not how you should feel.

02 — ENERGY TRACKING

Log energy at morning, midday, evening. After one week the pattern shows you exactly what depletes and what refills.

03 — BOUNDARY AWARENESS

Notice the moment you agree to something you did not want to. Do not change your answer yet. Just notice.

04 — SLEEP HYGIENE ANCHOR

One fixed wake time every day. The most powerful single intervention for preventing drift from deepening.

05 — STRESS INOCULATION

Deliberately face the smallest version of your most common stressor. Brief exposure reduces its accumulative grip.

06 — PATTERN SPOTTING

Keep a five-day trigger log. What consistently costs you energy? What is the earliest signal? Name the loop before it names you.

YOUR PATTERN CARD — READ AT THE START OF EACH WEEK

THE LOOP
& THE INTERRUPT

TRIGGER

Saying yes again when you mean no · Accumulating small commitments · Feeling like you are always slightly behind · Chronic mild overwhelm

Interrupt: These activate something real. That does not make them emergencies. Notice the activation without acting on it.

RESPONSE

Push through and ignore it · Compensate with caffeine or distraction · Brief irritability then back to normal · Quietly withdraw from optional things first

Interrupt: Protective responses, not character flaws. Slow them by 3 seconds. That is all that is needed.

ACTION

Work later to catch up · Scroll to decompress · Cancel low-priority social plans · Tell yourself it will ease up soon

Interrupt: Looking for relief. Ask: does this give relief, or silence while the real thing grows? Rest without disappearing.

COST

Baseline energy trending lower each week · Sleep quality declining slightly · Patience thinning with people you care about · Small joys becoming harder to access

Interrupt: Each 3-second pause at step 2 reduces the cost at step 4. Small interruptions, compounded over a month, produce real change.

YOU ARE NOT BROKEN.

YOU CAUGHT IT.

THAT TOOK HONESTY.

Use this on the hard days. Especially the hard days.
